IK WINNING WAR

Division Extelled. WORK OUTLINED

Gen. Marshall and Achievements of Army Construction

How essential to victory over the Huns was the work accomplished by the construction division of the United States Army was emphasized in toasts given last night at a dinner, at the New Willard Hotel in honor of Bris. Gen. R. C. Marshall, ir., and officers of the division. The hosts were representatives of the contractors who furnished the materials and performed the details of the work. About 500 persons were present. E. J. Mehren, editor of the Engineer ing News-Record, was toastmaster. The other speakers were Assistant Secretary of War Benedict Crowell, Brig: Gen. Marshall and Capt. Henry G. Gilliland of the Loyal North Lancastershire Regiment, who escaped from a German prison camp after spending two and a half years in cap-

Work Done in Winning War. The work of the construction division toward winning the war was outlined by Toastmaster Mehren. He told of the training of nearly 3,000,000 men for war, of the sending of 2,000,000 of those fighters across 3,000 niles of ocean and 500 miles of land to the battlefront in the old world, of the stand of the Americans which has made Chateau Thierry greater than made Chateau Thierry greater than the thrilling Thermopylae of olden times. And he continued:

"But what has all that to do with the matter in hand tonight? Everything, gentlemen, for before Chateau-Thierry and those other battles of last summer and fall had to come camps.

construction division which we home here tonight. Every mon of the way from Chateau-Thiatry to Sedan the construction division was in that fight no less than the men who were in the grout-line of battle. The cantonness, Construction Division Figures.

'In a general way we know what the construction division has done, but a few figures will serve to impress on us the magnitude of the task. It built in ninety days sixteen spidler cities, each for a population of $4,000 (now increased to about $6,000), with all the utilities, such as water, sewerage, electric power and fire protection, that a modern city requires. This feat remains still the greatest single schievement of our war preparations. We had to have the cantoniests quickly. We unloaded this asprecedented job on the construction division, and they came back in ninety days with the job done. Through their efforts Uncle Sam was able at the close of histilities to train I, 500,000 men at one time.

'The work done by the division will total about $200,000,000 in cost and of that large sum $400,000,000 was spent in a period of fifteen months, a record for construction under a single expanditurion that never has been approximated in the history of the world. At Panassa, the greatest annual expenditure, though in a time of lower material prices and lower wages, was under $50,000,000, while the whole cost of the cansi was less than the fifteen months' expenditure already referred to. Moreover the plans in hand would have raised the total expenditure by the division to $1,400,000,000.

Variety of Achievements.

"In variety of work there is nothing that comes in the way of non-mobile construction that the division did not handle. There were, in addition to the cantonments, new plants for making poisonous gases and ex-plosives, arzenals and forts, proving grounds and aviation fields, power plants and warehouses, docks and plants and warehouses, docks and great port terminals.

"Many of the jobs are of unprecedented magnitude, as, for example, the $40,000,000 South Brooklyn Army supply base. It will provide 4,000,000 square feet of storage in two ninestory besildings, each 200 feet wide and $50 feet long. In addition there are four piers each 1,200 feet long.

"Mercover, the work is not all of a temperary character. Many of the structures, such as the great port terminals and the warehouses, are of permanent construction.

ision and administrative ability a the top. The organization drew to itself the best brains of the country in the field of construction, and those in charge wisely gave full authority to the men in the field. Except for obvious necessary limitations, the field man was "on his own," and such wide authority could safely be given because the organization was handpicked from among those who had already demonstrated singular ability

One of the features of the dinner was the issuance of an "extra" called Construction News. It contained cartoons of some of the leading guests and quibs at the expense of most of those present. Its society page was an bounced to present "real intelligence." [PIERCE, Jessie, Asbury Park, N. J.

Though during its operations its contractors employed 400,000 men, the labor troubles were negligible, all of them being handled by a staff of five men, some of whom had other duties besides.

"It is fitting, therefore, that those who have seen the organization at close range, and watched it expand from the original band of thirty to a smoothly functioning organization of 6,000, should join in a public tribute to those who have written the name of the construction division so brilliantly not only into the history of the war, but into the engineering and construction annuals of this country."

Wants Praise Shared.

In response to the praise of the toastmaster, Brig, Gen. Marshall stated that he wished to distribute all of it to the officers of the division under him. PHILADELPHIA, January 18 -- Adniral Heary T. Mayo, commander of the American Atlantic fleet throughout its active service in war, speaking last night before the fourteenth annual Poor Richard Club Franklin day banquet, questioned the wisdom of converting battleships into transports to bring men back from France. "Armistice does not spell peace," he declared. "If this great war ends without difficulties following it will be different from any other war, and we may need our battleships at any time. The idea that the only thing to do now is to get the boys back quick is all wrong.

'The matter is settled now, and we must leave the direction of these matters to wiser heads than mine, but this making of the battleships over into transports I very much regret.

"If you knew how great a task it is to get a battleship prepared for war and to train and equip a crew you would know how terrible a blow it is to the Navy to have two-thirds of the trews taken off the ships and have them torn apart and sent to transporting soldiers."

The admiral paid high tribute to the men who stayed at home and trained the nien who went over into service. his making of the battleships over
